

Monitoring, managing, and updating your instance

You can monitor your instance, upgrade to a newer version, and configure clustering or high availability

Monitoring your instance

Accessing the monitor dashboard

Recommended alert thresholds

Setting up external monitoring

Configuring collectd for your instance

collectd metrics for GitHub Enterprise Server

Monitoring using SNMP

About system logs

Generating a Health Check for your enterprise

Updating the virtual machine and physical resources

Upgrade requirements

Upgrading GitHub Enterprise Server

Enabling automatic update checks

Increasing storage capacity

Increasing CPU or memory resources

Migrating from GitHub Enterprise 11.10.x to 2.1.23

Known issues with upgrades to your instance

Configuring clustering

About clustering

Differences between clustering and high availability \(HA\)

About cluster nodes

Cluster network configuration

Initializing the cluster

Upgrading a cluster

Monitoring the health of your cluster

Monitoring the health of your cluster nodes with Node Eligibility Service

Rebalancing cluster workloads

Evacuating a cluster node running data services

Replacing a cluster node

Configuring high availability replication for a cluster

Initiating a failover to your replica cluster

Configuring high availability

Configuring high availability

About high availability configuration

Creating a high availability replica

Monitoring a high-availability configuration

Initiating a failover to your replica appliance

Recovering a high availability configuration

Removing a high availability replica

About geo-replication

Caching repositories

About repository caching

Configuring a repository cache

Legal

© 2023 GitHub, Inc. Terms Privacy Status Pricing Expert services Blog