Setting up and managing your personal account on GitHub

You can manage settings for your personal account on GitHub.com, including email preferences, access to personal repositories, and organization memberships. You can also manage the account itself.

Managing user account settings

    About your personal dashboard

    Managing your theme settings

    Managing your tab size rendering preference

    Changing your GitHub username

    Permission levels for a personal account repository

    Permission levels for a project board owned by a personal account

    Managing accessibility settings

    Managing the default branch name for your repositories

    Managing security and analysis settings for your personal account

    Managing access to your personal account's project boards

    Managing your cookie preferences for GitHub's enterprise marketing pages

    What does the 'Available for hire' checkbox do?

Managing your personal account

    Managing multiple accounts

    Merging multiple personal accounts

    Converting a user into an organization

    Best practices for leaving your company

    Unlinking your email address from a locked account

    Deleting your personal account

Managing email preferences

    Adding an email address to your GitHub account

    Changing your primary email address

    Setting a backup email address

    Setting your commit email address

    Blocking command line pushes that expose your personal email address

    Remembering your GitHub username or email

    Types of emails GitHub sends

    Managing marketing emails from GitHub

Managing access to your personal repositories

Legal