Setting up paid organizations for procurement companies

If you pay for GitHub on behalf of a client, you can configure their organization and payment settings to optimize convenience and security.

About organizations for procurement companies

Businesses use organizations to collaborate on shared projects with multiple owners and administrators. You can create an organization for your client, make a payment on their behalf, then pass ownership of the organization to your client.

Creating and paying for an organization on behalf of a client

You can create and pay for a GitHub organization on behalf of a client.

Upgrading or downgrading your client's paid organization

Billing managers can upgrade or downgrade a client's paid organization at any time.

Renewing your client's paid organization

If your client's organization has a valid payment method on file, their yearly subscription will automatically renew. Billing managers can view and update the organization's payment method and subscription.
